Synopsis

Many associate the lady behind mrswizard.com with computers, techno gadgets, and the last year or so with the Kindle from .com. She does love her gadgets, but still needs to eat. She spent her early years growing up as a Navy Brat. There were lean times, and by today's standards her family might have been considered poor, but she and her two younger sisters never knew it. Her mother could make the most out of less, and there was always something good in her kitchen. Here are some of her favorites from that time, as well as a few she has managed to make her own over the years. In this book, you will find directions for food processor bread dough (yes, it is possible!), yummy cookies, and a way to make the caramel in caramel corn in the microwave in four minutes! There are also some one pot meals that will give you all kinds of ideas. Want to learn to make a great meatloaf? Borscht anyone? Pancakes? Waffles? This book will make you want to do "kitchen duty" with your Kindle often! She ain't Julia Child, but if you love to eat, you will love these recipes. I sincerely hope you try them out and tweak them to suit your own special needs and tastes. Use them as the beginnings of your own family specialties.

Customer Reviews

I just thumbed through this cookbook to look over the recipes. Very impressed with the recipes! It looks like I will be using this cookbook a LOT. The recipes, for the most part, appear easy to make using ingredients that I like and often have on hand in different ways.
